Voice of the People

To the Editor:

I would like to correct an error that was made in last week's paper. There are not sufficient funds to operate the Orland Park High School but the directors are going to try it another year.

We wish that all parents having children going to high school, if possible, would take at least one of the teachers orders and also any citizen who would be kind enough to help this great problem that confronts the whole school of educating our children.

At the present time there is not sufficient funds in the non-high school treasury to meet the growing demand for a high school education on account of delinquent taxes.

Please bear in mind we have five teachers and a janitor to pay besides all supplies which means we must have money and everybody is urged to please help all they can at this critical time, because we do not want to lose our high school.

All pupils wishing to attend the high school please notify one of the directors.

H. Adele Cooper,
President School Board.

Church Day Orland Park Community Center Foundation

The Orland Park M. E. church will sponsor a unique Church-Day at the Community Center Foundation on Sunday August 28th. This will be very similar to old fashion Camp Meetings.

At 7:30 a. m. there will be a sunrise service on the Inspiration hill. This will start the day. This will be followed by an out-door breakfast at 8:15. At 10 a. m. the Sunday school will be conducted out under the trees and this will be followed by the morning service at 11 a. m. which will be on the hillside under the trees. At 12:30 a pot luck basket dinner will be served.

The afternoon will be given over to special features and informal visiting. In the late afternoon there will be a special speaker deliver the afternoon address. The day will close with an out-door campfire, fellowship service or fireside service in-doors, as the evening permits.

The purpose of this day of worship in the out of doors is to bring the people together in the great out of doors for the inspiration of God's out of doors and the fellowship that can be gained in this way. All members and friends of the church are invited to come for any or all of the services. There will be transportation provided from the church for all who wish to attend. A special outside speaker is being invited for each one of the services.

The Community Center is being made quite comfortable now as a large enclosed porch ten feet wide and thirty feet long has been added to the side of the camp building. The building is being used quite a lot these days by those who enjoy overnight camps in the woods. New

Jacobs Warns Personal Tax Delinquents

August 8 was the last day for filing 1931 personal property tax schedules on orders from G. H. Bollman, chief of the personal property division under County Assessor, J. L. Jacobs. He has picked up all personal property schedules and recaps for the re-assessment of personal property for 1931 from the Bremen Township Assessor. To assure taxpayers that assessments are equitable, lists will be furnished probably beginning with the country townships within a few weeks.

The local assessor reports delinquent 5% who have not returned their schedules or second notices and to give these delinquents until Monday, August 15, to file so it will not be necessary for the County Assessor to estimate their values with a penalty, and should there be personal property owners who did not receive personal property schedules for Bremen, they can still call on the local assessor, Chas. Nielsen, at Tinley Park, or call upon the County Assessor, Room 319, County Building, Chicago.

Orland Gardners Win Prizes

About twenty of the boys and girls in Orland Park planted gardens at the Community Center. They were permitted to plant any thing they desired in their garden with the idea that the one who had the best garden would get prizes. The gardens were judged by three judges who were competent. The garden planted by Clarence Creer was awarded first prize and the garden of Owen Creer received the second prize. The prizes will be announced later. It is hoped next year to carry on this project and increase the interest in it.

The second annual parade and picnic sponsored by the Orland Park Legion Post last Sunday in the forest preserve on 143rd street in Orland Park, was a big success in every way.

Asks Tractors Be Barred

Upon complaint being filed with County Superintendent of Highways Glen Fletcher by Mayor John C. Nielsen against the county tractor being run over the Front street in Mokena due to the damage caused to the street surface by the sharp lugs of the tractor, Mr. Fletcher said he would have the tractor routed some other road. The Front street is to be repaired, but the work has been delayed as the village officials felt it was a waste of public money if the county outfit would continue to use the street and damage the street. Repairs will be made on this street shortly.

So far six fire departments from neighboring towns have agreed to take part in the parade which will be augmented with the Orland and possibly the Midlothian band, the Legion Post, other local organizations and many decorated floats. According to the number of entries received by Fire Chief John Helenhouse of Orland Park, the parade will be nearly a mile long.

BIG PICNIC AT AVON BEACH

Last Sunday nine families of Sedan Prairie and vicinity gathered together at Avon Beach for a day's outing. Picnic dinner under the shade of the big trees was a big feature of the day. And did we eat spring chicken? O, say, and how. The dinner was great but our appetites were also.

The afternoon was spent in various amusements, but Mrs. Kampe says, "O to go to Avon Beach and dance to the tune of 'Blue Kentucky Moon' is great stuff. Billie Stege who swims like a duck says "Come on in, the water is fine." Little Lucille Schilling in her pretty little red ducky bathing suit says, "I like to go swimming, but don't like to get my bathing suit wet".

Elsie Feigel with her kodak snapped the interesting sights. Did you see them?

Fred Stucky says, "O, those home-grown water melon.. Yum Yum."

Herman Neimeyer believes, "Follow the leader is a great game". Anyway coming home, while Mrs. Kampe believes picking wild flowers on the way home is still more sport. Guess everybody enjoyed the big day and hope again next summer we might enjoy another outing together. Vat say

The Value of a Savings Account

Many people are saving more money now out of reduced income than they did in their most prosperous days.

They are doing this not because they have been told to be thrifty, but because the past two years have shown more clearly than ever before that there is no substitute for a steadily growing savings account in a strong, well managed bank.

Steady deposits made by the average citizens of every community, are laying a new and solid foundation for the progress of the future.

Well, how are you all this week? We have good news for all—the depression is over, at least boys are going up, and Meyer has purchased a new Ford. Wonder if he will take us all for a joy ride?

O, yes and Al is still in the hospital. He says he has seen about everything there is to see around there so often, that it is becoming monotonous, but we are wondering. Heard that several of our men were at the Park dance last Friday. I guess maybe there are not attractions there for the girls only after all.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson,
Secretary
Illinois Press Association

A conference of federal and state highway officials was held July 26 in Springfield to discuss Illinois' share of the $120,000,000 emergency road work appropriation included in the federal relief appropriation. The state department of public works and buildings announced that arrangements had been made for federal highway men to discuss with Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer the extent to which this state might be able to alleviate the unemployment situation through the emergency road building program, funds for which are to be provided by the federal government.

Union miners in the state have repudiated a compromise wage agreement submitted to them recently after committees from both the miners and operators, meeting in joint sessions, had adopted a $5 basic daily wage. Governor Emmerson encouraged the wage negotiations, seeking employment for miners all over the state who are not now working.

That baby quail, as well as the matured birds are greedy for chinch bugs, has been fully demonstrated on the game farm operated by the state department of conservation on the Illinois state fair grounds. This conclusion was reached after a liberal supply of chinch bugs, trapped at Platt county cornfields, had been turned over to Superintendent W. S. Hair of the fair ground game farm for experimental purpose by Ralph F. Bradford, director of conservation.

The Justin H. Forrest stories of "Lincoln and Historic Illinois," printed in pamphlet form, are now available upon request to the state department of public works and buildings. Material from which the booklet was prepared was obtained from a series of travel stories, written originally for a Chicago newspaper by Mr. Forrest. Confined to less than 100 pages, including many illustrations, the booklet touches briefly on the many points of historic interest and scenic beauty in all sections of the state.

Lovebirds have caused three recent cases of parrot fever in Chicago, and one fatality has resulted, according to a report received by the state department of public health from Chicago health authorities. While rather rare, parrot fever is not a new disease. It is transmitted to man from infected birds of the parrot family. The three cases in Chicago are the first reported in Illinois this year.

Springfield led the entire state in the number of men prepared for mine rescue work, and in the number trained by mining men for first aid service, according to the coal report of 1931, issued by John G. Millhouse, director of the state department of mines and minerals. In all, during the year, 3,347 people in the mining communities became proficient in administering first-aid, as an added service of the eight mine rescue stations conducted by the state through its mining department.

Effective July 20, automobile transport trucks, more than 35 feet long, were barred from Illinois highways, according to an announcement from Walter L. Moody, chief of the highway police. Decisions in the eastern district federal court, Chief Moody stated, have upheld the action of the fifty-seventh general assembly that bars all motor vehicles in excess of 35 feet in length from Illinois highways. Police officers throughout the state, previous to July 20, had been warning drivers of the illegal vehicles that the law would be rigidly enforced. Arrests are now being made in cases where violators are apprehended.

"Taxes and the Retail Business Man" will be the theme of an address to be given by Frederick H. Scott, vice president, Carson Pirie Scott & company, over radio station WMAQ early in August. This is one of a series of talks being sponsored by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce in which radio audiences will be acquainted with efforts being made to solve the perplexing tax problems. Later George Scott, president of American Steel Foundries, will discuss "Taxes and the Industry of the State."

The sale of $18,750,000 worth of state revenue notes for relief funds, as authorized by the Illinois legislature has been completed through the placing of subscriptions for $1,175,000 worth of these notes, according to Edward L. Ryerson, Jr., chairman, Illinois emergency relief commission. Relief by state funds will stop after July, as the entire $18,750,000 provided by the state legislature will be exhausted by July 31.

Senator Harry G. Wright of De Kalb, member of the senate banking committee and Republican candidate for auditor of public accounts, is spending several weeks in the East studying the banking laws and banking conditions in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Canada. Senator Wright urges a drastic revision of the Illinois banking laws for better protection of the depositors and stockholders. During his trip he will confer with the Canadian minister of finance and with the state banking superintendents along the Atlantic coast.

Governor Emmerson has approved plans that eventually will lead to a faithful reproduction of Old Salem, the village in which Abraham Lincoln lived from 1831 to 1837. Reconstruction of the shops, cabins and stores as the Emancipator knew them will round out a four-year program of Lincoln shrine preservation undertaken by the governor in 1929. The construction plans were made possible by a $50,000 appropriation of the fifty-seventh general assembly.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has accepted an invitation of Gov. Doyle Carlson of Florida to accompany him on a fishing trip on the Gulf of Mexico in search of specimens of the "Silver King" tarpon to adorn the Florida exhibit at A Century of Progress. The party, which will include several officials of the exposition, will arrive in Jacksonville, Fla., August 1, and will remain in the South about two weeks on the fishing voyage.

Reduction of 9.36 per cent in downstate tax levies for 1931, now being collected, as compared to 1930, is shown in figures made public by the Illinois state tax commission. The report shows that the total of all taxes extended in Illinois for 1930 attained the staggering aggregate of $431,398,344. Of this amount, $290,280,586 is represented by the Cook county levy and $141,117,756 for the 101 other counties. The only division of local government which shows an increase in 1931 over 1930 is the township the report states, and points out that it will probably be greater next year owing to the fact that the last session of legislature transferred the cost of poor relief from the county to the township.

The library extension division, Springfield, will be an exhibitor at the state fair to be held August 20-27 in Springfield. Arrangements have been made for a display room in the exposition building, the same space as occupied in former years. Books, posters and book lists will be featured, as well as information concerning the status of library work and extension in Illinois.

Extensive plans are being made by the Illinois home bureau federation, composed of home bureau organizations throughout the state, for the annual state meeting to be held at Starved Rock state park on the Illinois river near Ottawa, Wednesday, August 10. Many are expected to bring their camping outfits, pitch their tents on the campground and make the home bureau meeting part of their vacation. Mrs. Henry J. Mies of Pontiac, president of the federation, believes the meeting will furnish an excellent opportunity for home bureau members from all parts of the state to see the more than 900 acres of rugged bluff land in this state park, with its many beautiful canyons and interesting historic background.

The Illinois Library association broadcast over WMAQ, Chicago, on July 23 was a practical talk by Mrs. Philip Dickinson of Hinsdale, a mother of four children, who spoke on "How the Public Library Is Used in My Family." These broadcasts, given in conjunction with the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers' broadcasts, are from 10:40 to 11 a. m., central standard time. They are designed to acquaint listeners with the resources of the public library.

State anticipation notes totaling $2,500,000 will be issued to pay principal and interest due August 1 on soldiers' compensation bonds. This issue will raise to $12,610,000, the money borrowed from the gasoline tax fund. The action was authorized by the governor, the auditor and the treasurer because of lack of money in the bonus fund. The law authorizing the borrowing of money on tax anticipation notes provides it shall be returned as soon as tax money comes in.

Representative Elmer J. Schnackenberg, secretary of the Illinois commission on taxation and expenditures created by the general assembly at its last session and chairman of its subcommittee on consolidation of local governments has announced that public hearings have been discontinued for the time being and his committee is now engaged in working out practical and effective plans for a simplification, consolidation, and reorganization of local government agencies in the Chicago metropolitan area and also in Illinois outside of Cook county.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation granted a $3,000,000 relief loan to Illinois, of which half or more will go to meet the critical situation in Chicago. The loan fell far short of the expectations Chicago had for aid from the government's gigantic $3,800,000,000 finance corporation and even $7,000,000 short of the application of Gov. L. L. Emmerson for an initial payment of $10,000,000 of the $45,000,000 Illinois is entitled to under the new relief bill.

Efforts of Hubert Baskett, seventy-eight, to save furniture from his burning home in Carmi cost him his life. His home was destroyed.

Had That Privilege

A poet was forbidden to sell his lyrics in a public park at Los Angeles. It wasn't meant to deny him the privilege of picking up an honest living in a park. No. But he must do it in the usual way. There would be no objection to a poet's disguising himself as a pigeon and accepting peanuts.—Detroit News.

Lesson for August 14

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS—DUTIES TO MAN

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Leviticus 19:18.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Ten Commandments.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Ten Commandments.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Loving and Helping Others.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Christian Interpretation of the Commandments.

The first table of the law sets forth the duties Godward, the second manward. The fifth commandment is the centerpiece of the Decalogue, keystone of the Sinaitic arch.

I. The Fifth Commandment (v. 12). This commandment rests upon the fundamental basis of fact that parents stand with their children in the place of God.

1. How this commandment may be broken.

(a) By showing disrespect to parents. Disrespect is shown to parents: (1) By speaking of them as "the old man" and "the old woman." (2) By living such lives as cast reproach upon them. (3) By being ashamed to be seen in their company.

(b) By disobedience. It is right that the child should obey its parents and it is the responsibility of the parent to see that obedience is rendered.

(c) By not supporting them in old age. When parents are no longer able to care for themselves it is the children's duty to care for them.

2. Promises annexed to this commandment.

(a) "That it may be well with thee" (Eph. 6:3). (b) That thou mayest live long upon the earth.

II. The Sixth Commandment (v. 13). The Scriptures show man's life to be sacred. Man was created in God's image. Every attempt to take human life is a thrust at God. This commandment may be broken:

By sinful anger (Matt. 5:22). By hatred (1 John 3:15). By immoderate use of meats and drinks. By immoderate recreation. By selling adulterated foods and diseased meats. By employers having unsafe surroundings, thereby causing the death of their employees. By failing to provide proper food and clothing for wives and children. By sending children to toil in shops and factories. By suicide. By infanticide. By wars.

III. The Seventh Commandment (v. 14).

This is a bulwark thrown around the home. The home is not only the oldest of God's institutions, but the foundation of them all. This commandment may be broken:

By unclean thoughts, affections, purposes, and imaginations (Matt. 5:27, 28; 15:19). By unchaste conversation. By wanton looks (Isa. 3:16; 2 Pet. 2:14). By immodest apparel. One's clothing is a strong factor in revealing character. By actual adultery. By divorce.

IV. The Eighth Commandment (v. 15).

This commandment strikes at the sin of theft. Many things are legally right which are morally wrong. This commandment may be broken:

By taking that which belongs to another. By using false weights and measures. By selling adulterated foods and inferior goods. By extortion. By employers defrauding employees, and employees failing to do honest work or to put in full time. By borrowing and not returning. By going into debt, knowing that payment is impossible. By usury. By graft. By lying advertisements. By making assignments to escape payment of debts. By gambling. By strong nations oppressing weaker ones.

V. The Ninth Commandment (v. 16). The sin aimed at by this command is a most deadly one—that of lying. This commandment may be broken:

By actual lying. By perjury—swearing to falsehoods by the name of God. By slander—speaking against another falsely with a purpose to injure. By tale-bearing (Lev. 19:16). This is commonly done by repeating a report without investigating its truthfulness. By creating a false impression (Exod. 23:1). By a breach of promise. By withholding the truth. By perverting the meaning of a statement. By exaggeration. By flattery. By recommending for a position of honor and trust a man who is unfitted for it. By granting a church letter to a man who is unworthy.

VI. The Tenth Commandment (v. 17).

This commandment strikes at the desire for that which is unlawful for one to have. The sin does not lie in the desire to possess things but in the desire to possess that which belongs to another.

Before and After Six o'clock Modes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TO SUM it up briefly, modish cottons tell the major part of fashion's story for summer. And what "airs" they are putting on now that the smart set is arraying itself in fine cottons for the very most formal before and after six o'clock occasions on the social calendar.

The costumes pictured herewith "speak louder than words" as to how cottons are carrying on in the environs of high society at the present moment. It would be difficult to conceive of anything smarter to wear for dining, dancing and calling during the afternoon hours than the swagger outfit illustrated to the right. No, my dear, the stunning little frock is not a printed silk as one might naturally suppose it to be, but guess what! It is a printed pique, if you please. Now, "ain't that sumfin'" worth "thinking through" when it comes to planning what to wear to the next smart afternoon affair dated in your engagement book?

It is interesting to note that the pique used for this good-looking dress is the fine-rib kind, for it is as stylish as are the wide-wale types. A striking black rambling design is imprinted on a background in light beige. A charming scalloped-all-around little jacquette of black transparent velvet accents the note of elegance which pervades every detail of this ensemble. Right through the summer style program we are being made to feel that life in the world of fashion is largely a matter of just one cunning little velvet jacket after another. The model pictured is really one of the most youthful and flattering types brought out this season.

As to the color scheme of this costume, it is faultless. The hat tones in most artfully, being a beige straw, with a red flower motif at the front just to give a splash of vivid color. By the way, had you heard that it's the latest to pose a flower or bouquet of flowers at the front of the crown—ever so new and chic looking and it is the style.

There is really no limit as to how formal pique may be. Leading couturiers are making some of their loveliest evening gowns of monotone pastel pique, with such distinctive details as the new shoulder butterfly effects via ruching of self-fabric or in some instances bands of flowers formed of the material, with perhaps a full ruching outlining the hemline of the skirt.

As to organdie, and similar sheers also nets and lacy cotton meshes, they are flourishing in the evening festivities as never before.

Those who sense the last word in fashion express no end of enthusiasm for mousseline de soie, because of its being so exquisitely sheer and dainty. The delightful creation shown to the left is Vera Borea's (Countess de Regoli), who belongs to the younger school of French designers. It is Mme. Borea herself who posed for this photograph. Note how prettily the hemline of this very full skirt flaunts rows of delicately wrought shirings. The bodice is likewise daintily shirred. The jacquet, which is made of chartrreuse transparent velvet, also makes shirring a decorative theme, in that its collar and short puff sleeves show this treatment.

SMART SPORTS TOGS SUGGEST MILITARY

There are still no fashions that have endeared themselves to all Paris as much as those which suggest the military. Coats with shoulders like the epaulets of an officer's uniform, caps in the dull pale blue worn by the French army, gold buttons and anchors and other insignia that suggest the navy—all these are still favorite fashions of young people in Paris.

Sports clothes, especially, take frequently the military line and color. There is much blue and bright red, many combinations of red, white and blue, and many brass buttons about the suits and coats and dresses that are designed for golf, for yachting, for the beach and for general country wear.

Velvet Is Latest Entry in Midsummer Fashion

The arrival of velvet as a midsummer fashion was one of the surprises of the recent group of fashion collections shown by the Paris dressmakers to foreign buyers and members of the press. Lightweight velvet, woven in new textures as fine as other silk materials, was used to make dresses designed to wear even in the warmest summer months.

Velvet raincoats were shown by some houses. Velvet jackets for daytime town wear, long traveling coats of velveteen and many evening costumes were among the velvet fashions introduced during the collections.

The newer velvets are of two varieties—those which are firm and stiff, and those which are soft and supple and fall in deep folds. Miranda shows an evening cape, knee length, made of the stiff velvet.

Smart Handbag Fiber Cover Can Be Washed

One of the most practical as well as smart handbags seen recently has a fabric cover that can be removed for washing. The cover is of pique or linen and comes in most any color you like. Of course, it solves the problem of keeping the white handbag clean.

WHITE HAT VOGUE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

It does not matter whether you wear a light frock or a dark one, Paris says to top it with an all-white hat. Quite recently the best modistes are turning to fabrics for inspiration. The model pictured is a white ribbed transparent velvet beret-like turban. It has a rolled brim coming down low on the right side. A chic bow of self-material trims it.

Newest Frocks Are Cut on Bias With Few Seams

The triangle line is more and more in evidence in the new dresses. Bias cutting—so important in getting soft, smooth surfaces with as few seams as possible—marks a big majority of all frocks that are not in the tailleur class.

The double bias line, which ends by forming a triangle, appears to be the distinguishing feature of many of the new afternoon dresses.

Linen Coats

Top coats of heavy linen tailored with all the precise attention to details that mark coats of woolen fabrics are worn by the smartest young persons with linen or cotton dresses.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

SETANGYA, SATANTA AND BIG TREE

The excitement of a raid against the whites must have held considerable fascination for the

Setangya

Kiowa. There were the gathering of a war-party, the ceremonies, the preparations; the stealing out, every sense alert; the first glimpse of the white men; and the mad gallop down upon them, feathers flying, yelling, shooting. Then there was the battle itself, in which the startled white men sometimes were victors, but oftener not, and the return to camp with the spoils, where the women admired the warriors or wept for the slain.

The danger of such a raid only added to its excitement. It was the great outlet of the Kiowa people, and when the tribe was compelled by Custer to come in and settle on the reservation, even the presence of Fort Sill in their midst could not stop them from raiding.

Setangya (Sitting Bear) was the leader of the principal Kiowa war society. Satanta (White Bear) was second in rank, and Adoette (Big Tree) was not lacking in importance. Satangya and Satanta were signers of the Medicine Lodge treaty of 1867, by which the Kiowa agreed to go on the reservation. There seems to have been a mental reservation, however, with regard to raids, for the three chiefs were leaders in these forays.

Setangya's son, while engaged in raiding in Texas, was killed by the whites. The aged chief—he was sixty years old at the time—visited the scene, and managed to collect his son's bones. These he tied into a bundle and took them back with him to Oklahoma. A special horse was assigned the task of carrying this bundle wherever the old chief might go, and from this time until his death, the bones of the son accompanied the father.

In May, 1871, a year after Setangya's son was killed, the three chiefs assembled a large war party and prepared for an elaborate raid. The warriors rode into Texas, attacked a wagon-train and killed seven men. Forty-one mules were added to their herd, and the success of this exploit was the subject for much boasting, after the Indian fashion.

The agent at Fort Sill heard the news direct from Setangya, who could not keep from telling the story of the fortunate raid to all who would listen. Unfortunately for the three chiefs, the agent did not view this "battle" with the Indians' eyes, and caused the leaders to be arrested. They were to be taken to Texas and tried there for the murder of the seven men.

Setangya, however, bitter old Indian as he was, felt that he knew a better way of dying than being hung by the white men, as he thought would be his fate if he submitted to arrest. His son died fighting, and he determined to do likewise.

Singing his death-song, the old Kiowa wrenched the fetters from his wrists, drew a knife which he had hidden in his clothing, and sprang upon the guard. A volley of shots stopped him, fired by the surrounding soldiers. And so died Satangya, as he wished to die, fighting.

Satanta and Big Tree were brought to trial, and their sentence was life imprisonment in the Texas penitentiary. This sentence was not served, however, for only two years later they were given their freedom on condition that the Kiowa would become peaceful and behave well. But the Kiowa were still a raiding people. Peace imposed such a burden upon them that in 1874, they uprose and caused considerable trouble.

Satanta was arrested again. The popular chief, princely and dignified, as he has been described, was taken back to the Texas penitentiary.

Perhaps the memory of Setangya's death came to him, or perhaps he felt that he was disgraced by the outbreak of his people after his release. At any rate, he jumped from an upper story, and was killed.

Big Tree, the last of the chiefs who were on the fatal raid, was held at Fort Sill. He was younger, and therefore less firmly an Indian in his ideas, than the other two. He became friendly, accepted Christianity, and lived on his allotment of land in peace.

Shortest Course on Ocean

The shortest distance between two points on the same parallel of latitude (except on the equator) is not this distance on the parallel of latitude but rather the distance on a "great circle" around the earth, passing through the two places. This can be understood more readily by reference to a globe or ball. Books dealing with navigation point out that a great circle course is shorter than the "rhumb line" or simple Mercator track. The assertion that it would be shorter to take a course that goes north of the parallel of latitude is correct.

Oaths of Office

The custom of an official's taking an oath of office to administer the laws did not originate with the Christian religion. From the earliest records of the Jews such oaths were required.

SYNOPSIS

Ragged, and starving, a boy of about fifteen is found in the woods by a camping party, having fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Fed, and in clean clothes, the boy Shad (Sheridan) is sent to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. He goes to work in Amity Dam, and becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, village character. Bat Morryson comes, determined to take his son back to his own dissolute life. He is overawed by Colonel Blake, the district attorney, and his father passes out of Shad's life. A girl, young and pretty, comes to Brown's shack, inquiring for him. Shad applies himself diligently to his neglected education. Love for Ruth Blake takes a strong hold on his heart. In an attack made on the Perry family, Oscar Perry, the father, is fatally shot, and his daughter, Mrs. Doolittle, wife of Cyrus Doolittle, is seriously wounded. Circumstantial evidence points to Bumpy Brown as the assailant. He is arrested. The friendship between Shad and Ruth Blake kindles love. Colonel Blake arranges for the youth to take up the study of law, under his guidance. New evidence points to Robert Royce as the possible murderer of Perry.

The Mysterious Arm.

Colonel Blake's offices were up one flight from the main street of the village in the rear of a brick building. It is necessary to the understanding of a singular event in the case of the People against Brown, that the reader should have a clear perception of a part of the structure of these offices and the points at which the help employed near their entrance was stationed.

There was an outer room in which a young typist received all comers. The typist opened a panel in an oak partition and gave their names and the nature of their business to a clerk who sat at a table inside the partition and against it. Shad was immediately trained for this latter task.

The evening train for the south was almost an hour late. Shad ate his supper with a small bag in his lap and got aboard the train arriving at the county seat about eight-thirty. There were not more than half a dozen people in the streets.

He went to the office. The ante-room was dark. The colonel's key was in the door that opened from it to the large room occupied, in business hours, by clerks and stenographers. The colonel was at work in his private room the door of which was open. Shad put the bag on his desk and removed his overcoat and muffer. The lawyer came out and greeted him. They stood a moment talking together. Colonel Blake stood facing the door.

In the middle of a sentence he stopped suddenly. He was looking at a man's arm which had been thrust through the open slide in the oak partition. Its hand seized the little leather bag on Shad's desk. Before the colonel had quite recovered from his astonishment it vanished with the bag. The lawyer ran to the door. It would not open. It was locked. The thief had turned the key on its farther side. The bag was gone with the man who had seized it, and they were helpless. The colonel ran to the telephone and called the sheriff. With two minutes the latter, with his deputies, was out on the streets.

Colonel Blake returned from the telephone.

"The Devil and Tom Walker!" he exclaimed.

"This kind of thing is well enough in fiction, but when it jumps into real life it's going too far. That was the arm of the murderer or an accomplice. He may have followed you from the train. If I had not been here he might have overcome you with violence. We are getting close to the guilty man. He is scared. He is desperate. He thinks that the revolver is a vital part of our case. He doesn't know that it is so well known that it is no longer needed. Its evidence is on record."

"My old slouch hat was in that bag with the revolver," said Shad.

Colonel Blake went to the telephone and called the home of Judge Swift in Ashfield.

"I have reason to believe that the man who killed Oscar Perry is in or near this village. Please go quickly and see if Robert Royce is in Ashfield. It's important. Let me know at my office as soon as possible," the colonel requested.

The sheriff came and unlocked the door.

"We've scoured the town," he said. "We have seen no stranger. I learn that a team hitched to a buggy stood in front of your door a few minutes ago. It faced toward the river. A woman sat in the buggy."

The lawyer told what had happened in the office.

Sheriff Colewell said: "The thief, whoever he is, got into that buggy with the bag and was a mile out of town when you called me."

The telephone bell rang. Colonel Blake answered it. He was astonished by the information that came to him from Judge Swift. It was this:

"Robert Royce is now sitting by the fireside at the Westminster hotel in Ashfield. Rodney [the proprietor] tells me that he has been sitting in the chair he now occupies ever since he finished eating his supper about quarter past six."

Blake told the judge of the singular incident of the evening and rang off. He came out of his office.

"Well, Sheriff, I'm about ready for an important move in this game of checkers," he said. "I've got a man in the king row. I'm going to move for Bumpy Brown's release on bail."

The County court convened in the morning.

The district attorney, in view of the discovery of new evidence in the case of the People against William Brown, moved for the release of the defendant on bail freely offered by a number of responsible Grand Army men. "I am convinced that the prisoner if he is set free can be of some service to us."

The motion was granted. Late that afternoon Colonel Blake called Shad to his office. He said: "I think that you now have a chance to render me an important service. I want you to go up with Bumpy Brown tomorrow and live with him or near him for a couple of weeks. The old man likes you and Bony. For you, especially, he entertains a real affection. Perhaps you can get him to help us. I want to know who is that pretty Miss De Long who works in South Bolton and who came to his little house one Sunday when you were there. I cannot place her. She seems to have dropped out of the skies. How does it come about that she and Bumpy Brown are on familiar terms? I have staked out the ground for you. It may be that love can accomplish what fear could not."

"I don't believe that I ought to do that," Shad objected. "The old man has been good to me."

"And I want you to be good to him. You are not to be a spy but a friend. You will be under no obligation to report anything which he is unwilling that I should know."

"Then I shall enjoy my job," Shad answered.

The next day Shad got a livery team and an ample store of provisions for Bumpy's larder. He telegraphed to Bony asking him to meet them at the Fun Shop. They put a warm brick in the bottom of Dick's cage and covered its bars with a shawl. Before noon they arrived in a sleigh at the end of the trail leading into Brown's cove.

Bony, standing by the door, waved his hat as they drew near.

"Welcome home!" he shouted.

Bumpy shook his hand but did not speak. They hurried into the shack. Bumpy stood a moment looking up at the portrait of his wife. Just a faint, quivering "Hello, mother!" came from his lips. He hurried to the filled water pail, took down a dipper and drank.

Shad winked to Bony as he said: "We'll go out an' break up some more wood an' leave you with the woman a few minutes."

The boys went out-of-doors and cut down a dead tree in the near thicket.

"I never heard him call her 'mother' before," said Shad.

"Nor I," Bony answered. "Ye know I'm kind o' scared for the old man. I don't see how he's goin' to make a livin'. It's winter time. He can't travel around much. He has to git home every night to look after that ol' bird."

"He has some money saved up and if he needs more the colonel is going to give it to him."

They returned to the shack. Bumpy was now in a cheerful mood. The bird was laughing and going over his reminiscent and familiar sayings on the broad window-sill near the oven. Shad unwrapped the supplies.

"Well, boys, there's some dead so'gers layin' around here, but we might be in worse shape, as a feller used to say that had a hump on his back," Bumpy began. "Don't look so solemn. We'll fix up a good dinner. You look kind o' nervous. What's the matter?"

"I've been talkin' with some fools that still think you're guilty," Bony answered.

"Well, fools are like frogs in a pond. You can hear 'em preachin' day an' night, but nobody is ever converted."

Bumpy had washed at the sink and was drying his face and hands.

"The People ag'in' Brown!" he exclaimed, looking downward in a thoughtful manner. "Boys, to tell ye the dead honest truth, ol' Brown has been a fool himself. If there's anything that fools hate it's competition. Folks used to say that Brown was quite a feller. I thought so myself but I've turned ag'in' him. Well, boys, let's not git excited. You've worked up some wood. Let's skirmish around for some happiness."

He began to prepare a venison roast for the oven.

He turned to the boys and said: "Boys, it'll be a kind of a grindstun for yer appetites if ye keep on with the wood job till I git dinner ready."

They went to the ravine and resumed their work with Bumpy's ax and buck-saw. In an hour or so the old man came out and shouted to them: "Don't tear down the woods. Can't ye see when ye've gone fur enough? Come in to dinner."

As they came he added: "I don't dare let ye git too hungry. I want suthin' to eat myself. Go an' wash yer hands."

They sat down to their dinner of venison and baked potatoes and biscuits and coffee. Bumpy was happy again.

Its Hand Seized the Little Leather Bag on Shad's Desk.

Their dinner eaten, Bony asked him to tell about his life in jail.

"I don't want to think of it," said the old man. "This mornin' I got into the sheriff's bathtub an' washed it all off me."

The boys helped with the dishes. As they sat by the fire Bony drew three Amity Dam cigars from his pocket and generously passed them.

"No, I'm too tired. The pipe fer me," said Bumpy. "I don't like Eph's cigars. They're kind of quick-tempered. I want peace tonight. Cigars are like Indians, hostile an' friendly."

"I'll take a chance," Shad resolved as he and Bony lighted up.

The boys sucked hard but could get no smoke.

Bumpy got a piece of wire.

"Ram that through 'em," he suggested. "Then maybe they'll behave. Learn 'em who's master."

The obstinacy of the two cigars was overcome by the wire, but the boys spat frequently and seemed to be getting the worst of it.

"I think that Eph's cigars are made to keep boys good," said Bumpy with a laugh.

"They have gizzards in 'em," said Bony with a sad look. "They're as hard to kill as a cat."

Simultaneously the boys gave up, having decided that as an aid to happiness the cigars were a failure.

"I ought to have known better," said Shad. "I haven't smoked since I quarreled with a cigar named Eph's Best in Bony's room one night after Miss Spenlow had gone to bed. It almost crippled me. How do you get along with that woman?"

"Same as ever," said Bony. "Sniffs an' looks me over every night when I come in. Sometimes she makes me go an' take a bath 'fore I go to bed. It's awful."

"How is the Home for the Friendless?"

"Gosh! She's bringin' me up fer the Home. Miss Benson has made her chairman of the infants' committee. She's terrible strict now."

Bumpy got out his fiddle, tuned it up and played while the bird sang. It was time to light the lamps when Bony left. Shad and Bumpy were going up to the Dam in the morning to get kerosene, saleratus and other needed supplies.

"I'll see you tomorrow," said Bony as he went away.

Bumpy lighted the lamps. He had strung a clothes line and put out a lot of bed clothes to air in the breeze. Mattresses, sheets, covers and pillows were now brought in and heaped on chairs around the stove.

After 4,000 Years

A great cemetery has been discovered by an expedition working at Tepe Hissar, near Damghan, Persia. Scores of graves have been opened, revealing the remains of a people some 4,000 years old. Their racial origin is unknown, but it is possible that they form a connecting link between India and Mesopotamia. "It is an awe-inspiring sight," says Doctor Schmidt, the leader of the expedition, "to look upon the remains of a hundred people, dead ages ago, exposed with their mortuary equipment to the sunlight, in one great necropolis. Thus we found them in the main mound at Tepe Hissar."

"Ash Can Derby"

Coming Event

Now that it is all settled that an "Ash Can Derby" Sweepstake Race of $50 automobiles will be run at the Roby-Chicago Speedway on Sunday, September 4, the entries are starting to come in. The first is Stanley Rammell, 1650 North Rockwell Street who enters a 1922 Earl touring car which he calls "Oil Can". Many sportsmen have taken an interest in the famous Van Camp classic and have offered prizes. In addition to the cash prizes for the Ash Can Derby the winner of first will receive one handsome Woolworth car opener; second, one beautiful Kresge corkscrew; third one exquisite 1932 calendar. The prizes for the drivers with the worst looking cars are first, one pair of dark tinted glasses; second, a bottle of smelling salts; third, one left handed monkey wrench.

Prizes for costumes are first, one tin lizzy watch; second, one pair slightly used garters; third, one tow rope. Each of these events also carries a cash prize for the winner.

It is expected that not less than seventy-five entries will be received for the World's Worst Automobile Race and the event is sure to attract the largest crowd that has ever attended an event at the Roby-Chicago Speedway.

In addition to the Derby, there will be professional automobile races with some of the best dirt track drivers of the country entered. There will be motorcycle races with all the leading stars of the country and stock car races with practically every make of automobile entered.

The meet is being run under the management of the newly organized National Speedway Incorporated and entries may be made by addressing the Manager of the company, B. Ward Beam, 1032 East 46th Street, or calling Atlantic 2511.

Diet In Hot Weather

These sultry summer days call our attention to a diet which will be most conducive to comfort and good health. Light food stuffs are preferred to heavy high caloric type of diet followed throughout the winter months. It is of prime importance to take advantage of the seasonal foods and there is no time of the year when fresh vegetables are as palatable as at the present. There is no time like the present for living close to nature; and enjoying nature's beauties and restorative powers. As Lowell the poet says:

"It is good to be abroad in the sun,
His gifts abide when the day is done,
Each thing in nature from his cup
Gathers a several virtue up."

And many are availing themselves of the opportunity of basking in the health giving rays of the sun. The innumerable tourists, campers and vacationists are availing themselves of these invaluable scenes with nature and her wonders.

It is during the summer months that the concentration of the life-giving Ultra-violet rays is at its highest peak. The growing vegetable plants during this period are exposed to these rays and as a consequence absorb a maximum quantity of them. At the same time, the Vitamine capacity of the green garden legumes is at its fullest limit. Therefore I unhesitatingly recommend the use of a large portion of vegetables and fruit for a summer diet.

DON'T WAIT
ANOTHER SUMMER

Start SAVING with an electric refrigerator NOW

Thousands of thrifty women are discovering that their electric refrigerators are practically paying for themselves. They save in so many ways. In time and convenience, of course. But also in money. There are no left-overs, no spoiled foods to throw away. Perishable foods can be bought in large quantities whenever prices are low. Dozens of tasty, inexpensive salads and desserts can be frozen in an hour or two. Why not investigate now? Electric refrigerator prices have never been so low. See the new models at your Public Service Store or your Local Refrigerator Dealer's.

A Question of Economy

"How much does it cost to have a farm telephone?" That is not the question. The real question is: "How much does it cost not to have a telephone?" Often one call is worth more than the cost of service for a year. A telephone may save a life, prevent great loss by fire, bring better prices for produce and stock, or bring happiness to the family. It can do this—and more! And it has! The telephone is not an expense but a saving—an economy! And for the small cost what else can give you so much profit?

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S TRAVELS

Historically Correct Sketches
By CALVIN FADER

FOUR months after his wedding, Washington was honored with a seat in the House of Burgesses. As he entered the legislative chamber of the old Capitol at Williamsburg, members rose to their feet, and this young man of 27, with six years of arduous and faithful public service to his credit, was so abashed at his formal welcome to new duties in the name of Virginia that he could not speak. This historic building at the left was given the name "Capitol" for the first time in America.

DURING his service in the House of Burgesses, Washington's travels were confined to the King's Highway, which was the main thoroughfare between Alexandria and Williamsburg, with Raleigh Tavern marked by the old foundation stones above, as the terminal point in the Colonial capital. Here Washington was an occasional guest and probably took part in the convivialities of the sessions held in the "supplemental house of Burgesses," where, by the way, the skull of the pirate Teach, was used as a punch bowl.

From $12 a Week to $28,000,000

IT IS no wonder that George Slaughter and his granddaughter, Martha Slaughter, are smiling broadly. George is sixty-five years old and has been working in Santa Rosa, Calif., for $12 a week, but has learned that he and a brother and sister have fallen heirs to a $28,000,000 estate left them by their grand-uncle, John B. Slaughter, whom they never had seen.

CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

WHEN Peter Rabbit first heard that Rattles the Kingfisher's house was a hole in the ground he didn't believe it. No, sir, Peter didn't believe it. He knew that some of his feathered friends built their homes on the ground, Mrs. Grouse, for instance, and Bob White and Carol the Meadow Lark, but he just couldn't imagine a real bird living in the ground. Johnny Chuck told him about it. Johnny had heard the feathered folks of the Old Orchard talking about it.

"I'll believe it when I see it," declared Peter.

You know a great many people are like Peter in that they must see a thing in order to believe it. So Peter refused to believe that Rattles the Kingfisher actually makes his home in the ground, but his curiosity was aroused, and once Peter's curiosity is aroused he has no peace and he gives his friends no peace until it has been satisfied. So the first chance Peter got he hurried over to the Smiling Pool. He knew that Rattles spends most of his time there or along the Laughing Brook, or over by the Big River, and he knew that the other people who live there must know something about him. Grandfather Frog was sitting on his big green lily pad watching for foolish green flies. Peter has a great deal of respect for Grandfather Frog, who is accounted very old and very wise. He waited until Grandfather Frog had caught several foolish green flies, for he had learned by experience that Grandfather Frog was a great deal more likely to answer questions when his stomach was full. When he thought that it was wise to do so he ventured a question.

"What Is It You Have Heard?" Demanded Grandfather Frog.

"If you please, Grandfather Frog, where does Rattles the Kingfisher make his home?" asked Peter in his most polite manner.

IT COULD BE WORSE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

HOW dear a roof when days are raining,
How fair a fire when nights are sunny,
Why can't we count the joys remaining?
Life always leaves a little gold.
I know we did not know the measure
Of joy when only joy was here,
For we must lose a little treasure
Before the rest is really dear.

We walk unseeing through the clover,
We pass unnoticed flower and tree,
And then we find the summer's over,
And autumn here, and then we see.
I'm old, the autumn days surround me.
No clover now, no tree, no flower,
But surely something I have found me
To give me comfort in this hour.

We spend our lives like spending money,
For little joys, for new delights.
Who needs a fire when days are sunny,
Or needs a roof on summer nights?
And yet I never knew a brother
Who couldn't say, "It could be worse."

It always seems, somehow or other,
Life leaves a little in the purse.
(©, 1932, Douglas Malloch.)—WNU Service.

"Chug-a-rum! How should I know?" replied Grandfather Frog gruffly.

"Because you are so wise that you know everything," said Peter.

"No such thing. No such thing. Nobody knows everything," retorted Grandfather Frog, still speaking, gruffly, but it was plain to be seen that he was a wee bit flattered.

"Well, you know so much that it amounts to the same thing," declared Peter. "I have heard such a queer thing about Rattles the Kingfisher that I can't believe it. I guess it is just gossip among the other birds who don't seem to like Rattles very well."

"What is it you have heard?" demanded Grandfather Frog.

"That Rattles makes his home in a hole in the ground," replied Peter.

"Well, I don't see anything hard to believe about that," grunted Grandfather Frog. "Why shouldn't he live in a hole in the ground?"

"Why, because he is a bird," replied Peter.

"Chatter the Red Squirrel lives in a hole in a tree, doesn't he? And happy Jack the Gray Squirrel builds a nest in the top of a tree, doesn't he?" asked Grandfather Frog.

"Ye-es" replied Peter slowly, trying to see what Grandfather Frog was driving at.

"Well, they are not birds; they are animals. If they make their homes in the trees, why should not birds make their homes in the ground?" continued Grandfather Frog.

This was too much for Peter. Why shouldn't they? There was no reason why they shouldn't. "Then it is true that Rattles makes his home in a hole in the ground!" cried Peter.

"Of course it is true," replied Grandfather Frog gruffly. "There isn't any reason in the world why it shouldn't be true. Rattles is a bird of sense."

"Where is it?" asked Peter eagerly.

"That is none of my business, nor is it any business of yours," declared Grandfather Frog. "I never have asked Rattles where it is, and if I knew I wouldn't tell you. I never pry into other people's secrets, and if you will take my advice you won't either, Peter Rabbit. It is a bad habit. No good comes of it. Now run away and attend to your own affairs, I want to take a nap."

Peter knew he had learned all he could from Grandfather Frog, so he thanked him and started off. But as he hopped along, lipperty-lipperty-lip, he was more curious than ever about the home of Rattles the Kingfisher, and he quite forgot Grandfather Frog's advice to mind his own business. He made up his mind that he would find the home of Rattles.

SOME VEGETABLES

WHEN one realizes what a wealth of healthful qualities are grown in our gardens, what a comfort it is to step into them and pull a few fresh radishes or an onion or two for flavor, it would seem that everybody with a 5-foot plot would try to grow some of the fresh green things. Did you ever hear anybody complain of a meal having too many vegetables? One may begin a meal with a vegetable cocktail and end it with a salad dessert. The main dishes may be vegetables, the entire and the drink if so desired.

Scalloped Egg Plant.

Cut a large egg plant into half-inch slices, pare them and place in salt water for a few minutes, then rinse and cut into cubes. Cover with boiling salted water and cook until tender. Drain well, add one small onion chopped and fried in butter, a tablespoonful each of chopped parsley and flour; cook, stirring for a few moments. Pour in a cupful of rich milk, add salt and paprika; when thick add the egg plant and turn into a buttered baking dish. Cover with buttered crumbs or dot with butter and bake to a nice brown.

Minted Carrots.

In every garden, even small ones, a bed of mint is treasured. A small root will live from year to year and it will always be ready for mint sauce or to add to juleps or punches as well as to garnish dishes.

Boil young tender carrots until tender, in very little water. Add butter, sugar, a little vinegar and two sprigs of mint.
